ANTH 101: Introduction to Anthropology

Online Extended Summer (May 17-June 28)

Instructor: Dr. Maureen Hays

CRN#30239

An introduction to the study of humankind, including archaeology, ethnology, linguistics and biological anthropology.

ANTH 202: Introduction to Archaeology

Online Summer I (June 8-July 8)

Instructor: Dr. Barbara Borg

CRN#30186

An introduction to basic theory and methods in the archaeological recovery and interpretation of past cultural remains.

ANTH 328: Aztecs, Mayas, and their Ancestors

Online Summer II (July 13-August 11)

Instructor: Dr. Barbara Borg

CRN#30604

This course is a multi-disciplinary approach to the study of Mesoamerica (Mexico and Central America) up to, and including, the arrival of the Spaniards in 1519. Although beginning with the peopling of this hemisphere, the emphasis is on the advanced civilizations of the Olmec, Teotihuacanos, Zapotec, Mixtec, Maya and Aztec.

ANTH 352: Folklore of Ireland and the British Isles

Online Maymester (May 17-June 4)

Instructor: Dr. E. Moore Quinn

CRN#30312

This course assesses how anthropologists use folklore to theorize about the complexities of human experience. Classic debates, theoretical approaches and strategies of interpreting folklore are examined. Irish cultural forms such as religious beliefs and practices, verbal art, material culture and music are explored.
